A seminar for parents, carers & educators offering a practical approach to supporting neurodivergent children

Gain insights from leading experts who are passionate and committed to improving outcomes for children with ADHD, ASD & complex needs. The seminar will include speaker presentations and a Q&A where you will have an opportunity to address the panel of experts:

Dr Geoff Kewley has 40 years' experience in the complex field of Neurodevelopmental Paediatrics. He has extensive experience in managing children with complex ADHD and related conditions. Geoff co-founded ADDISS, the UK Parent Support Group, and founded and chaired the George Still Forum the special interest group dealing with ADHD and related neurodevelopmental difficulties. He has lectured widely throughout the UK both at professional and parent groups.

Dr Tamara May is a psychologist in private practice and Senior Research Fellow in the Department of Paediatrics at Monash University. She has spent the last decade researching developmental disorders such as autism and ADHD with a lifespan approach. Tamara has run group and individual programs for clients with ADHD. Her research has focused on approaches to improve outcomes for people with developmental disorders and childhood origin mental health problems.

Nicki Levi is a highly qualified and experienced educator and advocate for people with ADHD. She holds a Master of Education degree (Research and Coursework) in Education of Students with Disabilities and has been a tenured academic at the University of Western Sydney. Nicki has extensive experience in general education and learning support of students with moderate to severe intellectual disabilities, multiple disabilities, behaviour disorders and autism.

Dr Billy Garvey is a Paediatrician with over 15 years' experience and the Senior Fellow in the Centre for Community Child Health at the Royal Children's Hospital (RCH) Melbourne. Billy is an expert reviewer for the Raising Children's Network and several academic paediatric journals. His research interests include supporting children with additional needs, educational collaboration, improving health literacy and promoting community engagement to support vulnerable families.
